Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine if there were differences in the prevalence of risk factors associated with low back pain between two groups of nurses. One group consisted of nurses who had no history of low back pain and the other group consisted of nurses who had a history of low back pain. A questionnaire was distributed to all participants asking them to report their demographic information, work-related variables, and self-reported health status. Results showed that there were significant differences between the two groups in terms of age, years of experience, and frequency of lifting. There were no significant differences between the two groups in terms of gender, education level, or frequency of walking.
